

Serge Paul Eholié
Côte d'Ivoire

Professor Serge Paul Eholié is a professor of Infectious and Tropical Diseases at Treichville University Teaching Hospital in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire. He is a senior lecturer at the Medical School of University Felix Houphouet Boigny, in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire.

He received his medical degree from the University of Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire and later specialized in infectious and tropical diseases. He was trained in HIV management in France (Marseille and Paris) and has served as a trainer in HIV in several African countries. He is currently the President of the Réseau Africain des Praticiens Assurant la prise en charge des personnes vivant avec le VIH/SIDA or African Network of HIV Practitioners for People living with HIV/AIDS (RESAPSI/ANEPA), the president of the African Society of Infectious Diseases (SAPI), and the vice president of Alliance Francophone des Acteurs de la Santé contre le VIH (AFRAVIH).

He is currently involved in research around HIV therapeutic strategies, HIV and hepatitis co-morbidities, HIV and non-communicable diseases, and HIV and ageing. Serge Paul EHOLIE is co-recipient with Xavier ANGLARET of the 2017 Christophe Merieux Prize for Research in Infectious Diseases in Developing Countries.